BE TRUTHFUL

My dear Children let me begin again with a beautiful story .

Once there was a shepherd boy in a village used to take his herd of sheep across the fields near the forest. He felt this job was very dull and wanted to have some fun. One day while grazing the sheep, he shouted, "Wolf! Wolf! The wolf is carrying away a lamb!" Farmers working in the nearby fields came running for help but didn't find any wolf. The boy laughed and replied, "It was just fun. There is no wolf here".

The boy played a similar trick repeatedly for many days. After some days, while the shepherd boy was in the field with the herd of sheep, suddenly, a wolf came out from the nearby forest and attacked one of the lambs. The boy was frightened and cried loudly, "Wolf! Wolf! The wolf is carrying a lamb away!" The farmers thought the boy was playing mischief again. So, no one paid attention to him and didn't come to his help.

So my dear children No one believes a liar even if they speak the truth , my humble advice to everyone is to remain always truthful even in your different moments.

Stay happy

Power of Gratitude: A Transformative Assembly Experience

In a world often bustling with activities and responsibilities, it's easy to overlook the simple yet profound act of gratitude. However, in a recent assembly focused on the "Power of Gratitude," students and staff were reminded of the immense impact that expressing thankfulness can have on our lives and the world around us.

The assembly included an exciting activity, wherein the selected audience was asked to pick a candy and then a question was asked as per the colour of the candy. The questions were related to the gratitude the person felt at a certain point in life. To illustrate the power of gratitude, the selected audience shared personal anecdotes and experiences for which they felt gratitude.

In essence, the "Power of Gratitude" assembly served as a poignant reminder that in a world often filled with challenges and uncertainties, gratitude has the power to uplift, inspire, and transform lives. By cultivating an attitude of gratitude, we not only enrich our own lives but also contribute to the creation of a more compassionate and harmonious world for all.

As schools prepare to reopen for a new session, a sense of anticipation and cautious optimism permeates the educational landscape. With the challenges of the pandemic still prevalent, schools must prioritize safety measures to protect students and staff. Embracing flexibility and innovation in learning approaches will be key to navigating this unique academic year.

The reopening of schools for a new session signifies a fresh start and a renewed opportunity for growth and learning. As students and educators return to classrooms, a focus on safety, adaptability, and resilience will be essential. The festival of Holi, known as the "Festival of Colors," is a vibrant and joyous celebration observed by Hindus worldwide. However, amidst the revelry and exuberance of this festivity, it is crucial to consider the environmental impact and safety concerns associated with Holi celebrations. One key aspect to focus on is saving water during Holi.

Traditionally, Holi celebrations involve the throwing and splashing of water and colored powders, leading to massive water wastage and pollution. Many communities and individuals now recognize the importance of conserving water, especially in regions facing water scarcity. One way to save water during Holi is to opt for dry colors or eco-friendly organic colors made from natural ingredients like turmeric, beetroot, and flowers. These alternatives not only reduce water usage but also minimize harmful chemicals that can harm the environment.

Moreover, organizing water-less Holi events, such as cultural gatherings, musical performances, and community service projects, can promote a more sustainable and eco-conscious approach to celebrating this festival. Encouraging the use of dry colors, promoting water-saving practices, and raising awareness about environmental conservation can help preserve precious resources while still enjoying the spirit of Holi.

By adopting eco-friendly practices, showing respect for the environment, and being mindful of water conservation, individuals can contribute to saving Holi while upholding the true essence of this colorful and festive tradition. Celebrating Holi responsibly can inspire others to prioritize sustainability and make a positive impact on the planet for generations to come.
